protection, opportunities, obligations, and social benefits, regardless of their backgrounds and membership in diverse groups.

- c. Dignity and worth of the person: Holding in high esteem and appreciating individual value.
- d. Importance of human relationships: Valuing the dynamic reciprocal interactions between social workers and clients, including how they communicate, think and feel about each other, and behave toward each other.
- e. Integrity: Maintaining trustworthiness and sound adherence to moral ideals.
- f. Competence: Having the necessary skills and abilities to work effectively with clients.
- 47. State the six aims present in the "Purpose of the NASW Code of Ethics."

ANSWER: The second major facet in the Code, the "Purpose of the NASW Code of Ethics," identifies its six major aims:

- 1. Identifying primary social work values
- 2. Summarizing broad ethical principles as guidelines for practice
- 3. Helping determine relevant considerations when addressing an ethical dilemma
- 4. Providing broad ethical standards to which the public in general may hold the profession accountable
- 5. Socializing new practitioners to the mission, goals, and ethics inherent in the profession
- 6. Articulating specific standards that the profession may use to judge its members' conduct
- 48. List the six categories of ethical standards in the NASW Code of Ethics.
- ANSWER: The facet of the NASW Code of Ethics called the Ethical Standards is by far the most extensive. It encompasses 155 specific principles clustered under six major categories. These include social workers' ethical responsibilities to clients, to colleagues, in practice settings, as professionals, to the social work profession, and to the broader society.
- 49. When confronting an ethical dilemma, it's important to use ethical reasoning to determine the right thing to do. According to Strom-Gottfried, what are the six questions that help in making a decision?

ANSWER: Strom-Gottfried proposes a strategy of asking and answering six questions to help make a decision when confronting an ethical dilemma:

- Who will be helpful?
- What are my choices?
- When have I faced a similar dilemma?
- Where do ethical and clinical guidelines lead me?
- Why am I selecting a particular course of action?
- How should I enact my decision?
- 50. Cite an example of a violation of social workers' ethical responsibility to clients.

ANSWER: Students' answers will vary.

Some examples of violations of social workers' ethical responsibility to clients are given below.

When a social worker advises a client about reaching a conclusion without informing the client about all the available options, the worker violating the principle of client self-determination.

When a social worker discusses the details of a client with other people without the consent of the client, the worker is violating of the principle of confidentiality.

When a social worker is associated with a client in any manner that hinders the worker from interacting with the client in a professional manner, the worker is violating the principle of conflict of interest and dual relationships.

When a client involves himself or herself in a sexual relationship with a client, he or she is violating the principle of sexual relationships.

51. Explain dual relationships according to Corey, Corey, and Callanan (2015). What is the Code's stand on such relationships?

ANSWER: According to Corey, Corey, and Callanan (2015), dual or multiple relationships occur when professionals assume two or more roles at the same time or sequentially with a client. This may involve assuming more than one professional role, such as instructor and counselor, or blending a professional and nonprofessional relationship, such as counselor and friend or counselor and business partner. Multiple relationships also include providing counseling to a relative or a friend's relative, socializing with clients, becoming emotionally or sexually involved with a client or former client, combining the roles of supervisor and counselor, having a business relationship with a client, borrowing money from a client, or loaning money to

The Code of Ethics states that social workers should not engage in dual or multiple relationships with clients or former clients where such people have any risk of being harmed. According to Syme (2003), it remains important for the worker to remember that there is always the potential for a conflict of interest and of exploitation of the person seeking help. This makes it critical that whenever there is a possibility of a dual relationship, the practitioner, who is the person who knows the difficulties that could arise in such relationships, must think about and discuss with a supervisor the potential conflicts of interest and exploitation before entering into such a relationship.

- 52. Jake is Connie's supervisor at the State Department of Corrections in Clinton. They both belong to the state association of correction workers. This association has conferences each year where state workers are asked to present true cases they have had on their jobs. Each year, Connie listens to Jake fabricate stories that he claims are true. She knows Jake never works a complete day, and she knows which cases he is assigned during their staff meetings. She is constantly disgusted with this and finally stands up during Jake's presentation, and shouts "Jake, you cheat, you know you are lying. You are disgraceful."
- A. According to the NASW Code of Ethics, was Connie in compliance or violation of the ethical standards?
- B. Under which ethical standard of the NASW Code of Ethics does this example fall?
- ANSWER: A. Connie was in violation of the NASW Code of Ethics due to her unethical conduct. She did not approach him directly, nor did she use an appropriate channel to help alleviate the problem. This is a violation of the Code.
 - B. This example falls under the category of social workers' ethical responsibilities to colleagues under the ethical standard of respect.
- 53. Explain the social workers' ethical responsibility to clients under the principle of conflict of interest.
- ANSWER: In the social work context, a conflict of interest is a clash between the responsibilities of the professional role and the potential for personal gain. An example is a hospital social worker who encourages clients to purchase health insurance policies from her spouse, who is an insurance salesman.

 The Code of Ethics warns practitioners to be acutely aware and steer clear of any possible conflicts of interest that might obstruct professional judgment. The Code emphasizes that clients' best interests must be protected to the maximum extent possible. If these interests are jeopardized, termination of the worker-client relationship and appropriate referral elsewhere may be necessary.
- 54. Explain the reasons why sexual relationships between social workers and clients are forbidden by the NASW Code of Ethics.
- ANSWER: The Code of Ethics uses powerful language to emphasize that workers should not have sex with clients under any circumstances. Parsons explains that the inappropriateness of a sexual relationship between helper and client rests in the fact that the helping relationship is unbalanced in power. Thus, the reciprocal nature characteristic of a healthy intimate relationship is not possible. Corey and his colleagues indicate that harmful effects can range from mistrust of opposite sex relationships to hospitalization and, in some cases, suicide. Other effects of sexual intimacies on clients' emotional, social, and sexual adjustment include negative feelings about the experience, a negative impact on their personality, and a deterioration of their sexual relationship with their primary partner.

55. State the eight dimensions included in social workers' ethical responsibilities as professionals by which they should judge their behavior and responsibility.

ANSWER: Social workers' ethical responsibilities as professionals include eight broad dimensions by which they should judge their behavior and responsibility.

- 1. They should be competent to do their jobs.
- 2. They should not practice, condone, facilitate, or collaborate with any form of discrimination on the basis of race, ethnicity, national origin, color, sex, sexual orientation, age, marital status, political belief, religion, or mental or physical disability.
- 3. They should not permit their private conduct to interfere with their ability to fulfill their professional responsibilities.
- 4. They should be honest and avoid fraud.
- 5. They should seek help when personal problems begin to interfere with their professional effectiveness.
- 6. They should represent themselves and their qualifications accurately.
- 7. They should never take credit for someone else's work.
- 8. They should not solicit clients for purposes of personal gain.
- 56. How can you protect client confidentiality in this electronic age?

ANSWER: Some simple rules to protect client confidentiality are as follows:

- 1. Keep passwords confidential.
- 2. Avoid calling up a password on the screen when others are in the room.
- 3. Avoid writing a password down or making it readily available on some database.
- 4. Alter passwords every few months.
- 5. Information conveyed in chatroom conversations and group mailboxes should also be carefully monitored.
- 57. According to Marson (1998), what are some of the reasons for social workers to use the Internet?

ANSWER: Social workers use the Internet for many reasons, including the following:

- a. Networking: This involves the establishment of communication and interpersonal interaction among people to provide support, exchange information, or achieve some designated goal.
- b. Sharing resource material to improve practice and agency service
- c. Identifying referral services for specific client needs
- d. Seeking out or conducting research: It is easy to consult with colleagues and to exchange documents regarding effective practice techniques and research projects.
- e. Communicating efficiently: When information must be conveyed quickly, e-mail provides a good alternative.
- 58. What are the issues and concerns faced by military social workers?

ANSWER: Issues military social workers face include serving during controversial wars, meeting the needs of the individual client while simultaneously meeting the needs of the military unit, the military's particular expectations regarding confidentiality, and personal fears inherent to the specific deployment. A key concern for these social workers in their practice is the basic ethical concept of self-determination on the part of individual soldiers versus the needs of fellow soldiers and the military operation itself.

Chapter 02

ANSWER: Human rights involve the premise that all people, regardless or national origin, are entitled to basic rights and treatment.

Within the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UNDR), there are three areas of rights: (1) political and civil rights, (2) social, economic, and cultural rights, and (3) collective rights.

- 1. Political and civil rights are often referred to as negative freedoms as they require a government to refrain from an overuse of its power against individuals. Examples of these rights are the right to freedom of speech and the right to a fair trial.
- 2. Social, economic, and cultural rights are referred to as positive freedoms as they require a government to take action for them to be realized for individuals. Examples of these rights are the right to medical care, the right to an education, and the right to a fair wage.
- 3. Collective rights are rights for groups of people and include the rights to religion, peace, and development.
- 60. Define human trafficking, and list its three characteristics.
- ANSWER: Human trafficking is the transfer of people across international boundaries to enslave them in some way, usually involving forced labor or sexual exploitation; human trafficking may also include infants and children who are purchased for adoption on the black market.

Three conditions commonly characterize trafficking. The first involves movement of the victim from one place to another. Second, deception or coercion is involved. Although the migration might be voluntary, the person is not truly aware of what lies ahead. The third element involves being forced into some form of physical labor or sexual activity against the victim's will.

- 61. According to Healy (2008), explain the four dimensions of international action.
- ANSWER: According to Healy (2008), international action has four dimensions: internationally related domestic practice and advocacy, professional exchange, international practice, and international policy development and advocacy.
 - 1. Internationally related domestic practice and advocacy: There are many examples of internationally related domestic practice problems, including refugee resettlement, work with other international populations, international adoption work, and social work in border areas. Domestic responsibilities for social workers include knowledge about people of other national origins in order to conduct culturally competent, effective practice with these people and the support of legislation both nationally and internationally that provides fair and humane treatment to people.
 - 2. Professional exchange: Professional exchange is the capacity to exchange social work information and experiences internationally and to use the knowledge and experience to improve social work practice and social welfare policy at home. This includes a range of actions, such as reading foreign periodicals and books in one's field and corresponding with professionals in other countries or hosting visitors.
 - 3. International practice: International practice is the preparation of some professional social workers to contribute directly to international development work through employment or volunteer work in international community development agencies.
 - 4. International policy development and advocacy: International policy development and advocacy is the capacity of the social work profession as a worldwide movement to publicly support values and legislation concerning important social issues.
