ESSAY

1. What challenges are facing HR managers with regard to workforce availability and quality?

ANS:

In many parts of Canada, there are shortages of workers with needed skills. As a result, HR professionals are concentrating on improving recruitment, training workers, and retaining skilled workers. Canadian students are slightly above the international average in math and science, but they are behind the students from directly competitive nations. Canadian schools are not meeting the demand for graduates with degrees in engineering, computers, and health sciences. These shortages have spurred international outsourcing.

2. What are the three major roles of HR management?

ANS:

The administrative role focuses on clerical administration. The operational and employee advocate role focuses on the management of most HR activities and serving as the employees' champion. The strategic role of HR focuses on HR as a business contributor and the "keeper" of organizational ethics.

3. Describe the major purposes of an HR management system (HRMS) in the organization.

ANS:

An HRMS enhances administrative and operational efficiency. It also improves the effectiveness of the organization. Efficiencies are created in the compilation of data and the automation of paperwork. Organizational effectiveness is served by providing data for HR planning and managerial decision making.

4. Discuss why ethical issues permeate HR management.

ANS:

Ethics deals with what "ought" to be done, not necessarily what is done. Ethical issues revolve around questions of fairness, justice, truthfulness, and social responsibility. Organizational ethics is driven by organizational culture: the shared values and beliefs of organizational members. Organizational members look to HR management as the "keeper and the voice" of organizational ethics. The HR department is often the main resource for ethics policies in the organization. The most common unethical incidents observed by HR managers include employees lying to supervisors, using drugs and alcohol, and falsifying records.

5. Describe the key competencies needed by HR professionals.

ANS:

In order to be a strategic partner to top management, HR managers need competencies in five basic areas: (1) strategic competencies, such as managing organizational culture, anticipating and responding to changes quickly, making strategic decisions, and connecting to market-driven and customer forces; (2) knowledge of business and the organization; (3) ability to deliver HR activities efficiently and effectively; (4) HR technology; and (5) personal and professional credibility.
