Fact Pattern 2-2

Wally and Janice are both managers in a small corporation set up to manufacture sporting goods. They both receive bonuses for any ideas that benefit the company, although Janice's bonus is computed at a lower rate than Wally's because she has been at the company a shorter amount of time. Janice has a great marketing idea that would result in her receiving a bonus of $1,000. She has it all worked out on her computer. Unknown to her, one evening after business hours, Wally obtains the information from her computer and submits it himself the next day. He is immediately awarded a bonus of $2,000 for the information. Fortunately for Janice, Sally, a custodian, saw Wally in Janice's office and heard him calling his wife while he was there to brag about his misdoings. Sally informed Blaire, the CEO, of Wally's actions.

61. Set forth the ways described in the text in which ethics and law are related.

ANSWER: (1) A judge or jury's assessment of the ethical character of an action may determine how the law is interpreted and applied in a given case; (2) law often reflects society's consensus about what constitutes appropriate behavior; (3) law can help define the roles managers play, how they play those roles, and whether they have played them well; (4) patterns of unethical behavior tend to result in illegal behavior over time; and (5) unethical conduct tends, over time, to lead to more onerous business regulation.

62. You are the owner of a small Internet company. You are planning a public offering in 12 months. You ask your accountant to prepare an optimistic business model that shows a greater profitability potential than a conservative estimate would produce. When the accountant questions your profitability assumptions, you remind him that he has been given 10,000 shares of the company stock at a low price. A public offering would dramatically increase the value of those shares. Discuss the ethical issues faced by the owner and the accountant. How should they be resolved?

ANSWER: The ethical business leader's decision tree should be consulted. An action that is illegal should not be performed. Assuming illegality is not involved, other considerations are whether shareholder value is maximized; and, if not, whether it is ethical to perform the action. It appears that bribery may be involved. If the optimistic business model would be inaccurate, the owner should withdraw the request; and the accountant should refuse to provide an inaccurate model.

64. Your company has grown from a national to a multi-national entity. How have your ethical responsibilities changed? To whom do you owe these responsibilities?

ANSWER: As the text makes clear in the section titled "When Ethics Travel," practices regarded as ethically unacceptable in the United States may be common practice in foreign countries. Students should discuss the fact that ethical responsibilities are owed to all affected including citizens and employees of a host country.

65. You are the CEO of a multi-billion dollar company. Your company employs over 75,000 people. The company is being sued for $100 million dollars as the result of racial discrimination against your customers. Your investigation reveals that some of your managers are actively violating the law. Discuss the steps you would take to ensure your company's compliance with ethical norms and legal requirements.

ANSWER: Students should discuss the need for an ethical code of conduct and the need to take immediate action to end the discrimination, including discharge of those responsible if needed.

67. List the two main schools of ethical thought and their main focus.

ANSWER: The two main schools of ethical thought are teleological and deontological. Teleological theory is concerned with consequences. Under teleological theory, the ethical good of an action is to be judged by the effect of the action on others. Deontological theory focuses more on the motivation and principle behind an action than on the consequences.
