3) List and describe the three factors that influence the organizational structure of all CPA firms. What are the most common forms of CPA firm organization?

Answer: The three factors that influence the organization of a CPA firm include:

1. The need for independence from clients. Independence permits auditors to remain unbiased in drawing conclusions about the financial statements.
2. The importance of a structure to encourage competence. Competency permits auditors to conduct audits and perform other services effectively and efficiently.
3. The increased litigation risk faced by auditors. Audit firms continue to experience increases in litigation-related costs. Some organizational structures afford a degree of protection to individual firm members.

Common forms of audit firm organization include:

- Proprietorship
- General Partnership
- General Corporation
- Professional Corporation
- Limited Liability Company
- Limited Liability Partnership

Terms: Factors that influence the organizational structure of CPA firms

Objective: LO 2-2

AACSB: Reflective thinking

4) List and describe the six organizational structures available to CPA firms.

Answer: CPA firms can take one of six organizational forms:

- Proprietorship. This form is limited to firms with only one owner.
- General partnership. This form is similar to a proprietorship, except that it applies to multiple owners.
- General corporation. Shareholders in a general corporation are liable only to the extent of their investment in the corporation. Many states prohibit CPA firms from organizing as a general corporation.
- Professional corporation. A professional corporation provides professional services and is owned by one or more shareholders. Personal liability protection for shareholders in professional corporations varies widely from state to state.
- Limited liability company. This form combines the most favorable attributes of a general corporation and a general partnership. LLCs are typically structured and taxed like a general partnership, but its owners have limited personal liability similar to that of a general corporation.
- Limited liability partnership. An LLP is owned by one or more partners. It is structured and taxed like a general partnership. However, the personal liability protection of an LLP is less than that of a general corporation or an LLC, but it is greater than a general partnership. Many accounting firms now operate as LLPs.

- 8) Discuss the relationship between quality control and generally accepted auditing standards.

Answer: For a CPA firm, quality control comprises the methods used to ensure that the firm meets its professional responsibilities to clients and others. Quality control is closely related to but distinct from auditing standards. The standards recognize that a quality control system can provide only reasonable assurance, not a guarantee that auditing standards are followed. A CPA firm must make sure that auditing standards are followed on every audit. Quality controls are the procedures used by the entire CPA firm to ensure that the principles in auditing standards are followed on every audit. Quality controls are established for the entire CPA firm, whereas auditing standards are applicable to individual engagements.

9) List and describe the six elements of quality control. Who establishes the standards for quality control?

Answer:

- Leadership responsibilities for quality within the firm — The firm should promote a culture that quality is essential in performing engagements and should establish policies and procedures that support that culture.
- Relevant ethical requirements — All personnel on engagements should maintain independence in mind and in appearance, perform all professional responsibilities with integrity and maintain objectivity in performing their professional responsibilities.
- Acceptance and continuation of client relationships and engagements — Policies and procedures should be established for deciding whether to accept or continue a client relationship or specific engagement. These policies and procedures should minimize the risk of associating with a client whose management lacks integrity. The firm should also only undertake engagements that can be completed with professional competence.
- Human resources — Policies and procedures should be established to provide the firm with reasonable assurance that all new personnel are qualified to perform their work competently, work is assigned to personnel who have adequate technical training and proficiency, all personnel should participate in continuing professional education and professional development activities that enable them to fulfill their assigned responsibilities, and personnel selected for advancement should have the qualifications necessary for the fulfillment of their assigned responsibilities.
- Engagement performance — Policies and procedures should exist to ensure that the work performed by engagement personnel meets applicable professional standards, legal and regulatory requirements, and the firm's standards of quality.
- Monitoring — Policies and procedures should exist to ensure that the other quality control elements are being effectively applied.

Quality control standards are established by the Auditing Standards Board for auditors of private companies and by the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board for auditors of public companies.
