21. Deep organization change, especially attempting to change the culture, is very difficult to accomplish. It is often difficult to convince others that change is necessary, especially when an organization is doing well. Knowledge of how to plan and implement organization change is limited. Implementation doesn't always proceed as planned. Some people sabotage the process. Some people resist the process. The goals are not sufficiently clear. Change, by its very nature, is messy.

22. The pace of change is much faster today. In the early 1900s, organizations could assume continuity, and continuity was their goal and way of operating. Organizations that make the same assumption today will not keep up with the pace of change that is demanded by the external environment—the capital markets and consumers.

23. Content is the "what" of organization change. It provides the vision and overall direction for the change. It has to do with purpose, mission, strategy, values, and what the organization is or
