2.3 Essay Questions

1) What factors reside in the perceiver, the target being perceived, or the context of the situation that operate to shape and sometimes distort perception?

Answer: Suggested answer:

- Attempts to interpret what is seen are influenced by personal characteristics of perceiver.
- Attitudes, motives, interests, past experiences shape the way we perceive.
- We often interpret others' behaviour based on our own behaviour.
- Personal expectations can distort perception.- Characteristics of target (e.g. volume, appearance, motion, sound, size), physical or time proximity of targets, and similarity of targets will influence what we perceive.
- Situational factors such as location, light, heat, events, work setting, social setting can influence perception.

2) Imagine you are mentoring a new manager who is going to supervise a staff of twelve employees. In a short period of time you conclude this manager demonstrates many introvert characteristics: she listens carefully and takes her time composing her responses; she shuts the door to her office several times a day, asking staff not to interrupt her; she leaves the office at lunch time and walks in a nearby park by herself, saying she needs to "recharge." Discuss the introvert as a manager; what will challenge this personality in this job? what can you conclude this personality will be good at as a manager?

Answer: Suggested answer: Introvert strengths:

- good listeners; often can absorb large amounts of information for synthesis; more likely to know the opinions and thoughts of those around them
- able to work alone for periods of time, which many managers need to do.

introvert challenges:

- lose energy when interacting with others and in high pace environments, so need to pace themselves
- quiet nature may make individual find conflict challenging and draining
- introvert/extrovert are not absolutes but a range on the scale, so all introverts will show degrees of the characteristics

3) Explain how perception and perceptual errors, such as stereotype and halo effect, create issues for managers in employment interviews, and performance evaluations.

Answer: Suggested answer:

- Perception—is about judgments and all people make shortcuts in judgments; managers must be self-aware in order to avoid negatively impacting their hiring decisions or performance evaluations
- Stereotype—may be a shortcut a manager makes in an interview or performance evaluation; being aware of personal preferences may help managers to limit the use of stereotypes and/or cause managers to seek further information to support or disconfirm their perceptions;
- Halo Effect—may be a shortcut a manager makes in an interview or performance evaluation; being aware of personal preferences may help managers to limit the use of stereotypes and/or cause managers to seek further information to support or disconfirm their perceptions;(Examples can be drawn from text, class discussion, Internet, newspapers such as Globe and Mail, etc.)

4) Discuss the "Big Five" model of personality and provide examples to show how this affects managers in an organizational setting.

Answer: Suggested Answer:

- Extroversion—comfort level with relationships (e.g., outgoing or reserved)
- Agreeableness—propensity to defer to others (e.g., valuing harmony or focusing more on own needs)
- Conscientiousness—number of goals on which a person focuses (e.g. focusing on fewer goals in a more purposeful way as opposed to pursuit of many goals and easily distracted)
- Emotional stability—ability to withstand stress (e.g., calm, secure, enthusiastic as opposed to nervous, depressed, insecure)
- Openness to experience—range of interests (e.g., innovative and imaginative versus conventional and finding comfort in the familiar)(Examples can be drawn from text, class discussion, Internet, newspapers such as Globe and Mail, etc.)

5) As a manager, you hire a person you know to be high in proactive personality. What might be positive outcomes and contributions this person could make, based on this personality trait? What might be the less desirable outcomes?

Answer: positives:

- identify opportunities for the company or department
- take initiative to help out/make decisions without waiting to be asked
- persevere with ideas or actions despite resistance or obstacles
- entrepreneurial in attitude to work; willing to try new ideas and work through problems
- willing to develop career and plan how to progress

negatives:

- may challenge present policy or practise if they think it is not valid
- more likely to leave the organization to start their own business
- may jump over the managers who supervise them, as they tend to seek out others and information in the organization, including those at high levels
- if career planning has been undertaken, they may still leave the company, creating a gap.
