2. What are the three elements of the Routine Activities Theory? Give an example of a situation that could lead to victimization.

The three elements are: Motivated Offender, Suitable Target, and Capable Guardianship. Motivated Offender is one is willing and interested in committing a crime; suitable target is one who appears vulnerable to the offender; and capable guardianship is some type of security measure or protection that would deter an offender from targeting an individual or establishment. An example would be a woman working a night shift job who needs to take the bus home from work and has to walk through a high crime area to get to her apartment. She may be perceived by motivated offenders to be a vulnerable target if she does not appear to have any protective items on her.
